

Anxicor by Laura Lapham

NARRATOR, a matter of fact voice, in the vein of a prescription drug commercial.

Setting: A person surrounded by a crowd of people.

---

NARRATOR

Do all of your friends suffer from anxiety? Do they struggle in crowds and crumble under the weight of societal norms?

Are you jealous of the bond they share? And wish you could fit in?

Well, now you can, with Anxicor.

Anxicor is a drug that mimics the effects of anxiety, so you can finally commiserate with all of your anxiety ridden friends.

If you thrive in social situations, speak easily in front of crowds, enjoy family gatherings where distant relatives ask about your personal life, fall asleep without contemplating the mistakes you've made over the last 12 years, and wake up each morning with a strong sense of purpose...

Anxicor may be for you.

With Anxicor you'll learn how to: mimic panic attacks, repeat yourself for fear of not being understood, imagine and obsess over the worst-case scenario, scream internally when people tell you to "not worry about it", and spontaneously break out in hives.

Now, when your friends say they can't go out because they're having a mental breakdown, you'll breathe a sigh of relief before being completely consumed by the thought that they're all talking about you behind your back and never liked you anyway.

40% of Americans suffer from some form of anxiety. Why not you!?

If you call in the next 10 minutes we'll throw in a squishy relaxation ball—it won't help, but don't say we didn't try.

Supplies are limited, so act fast.

Call 1-800-NERVOUS. That's 1-800-NERVOUS.